Third Sunday in Ordinary Time Cycle A 2026

In today's Mass all the readings are about discipleship. Discipleship is costly and challenging. It is a journey from darkness to light; it is fully accepting Christ as the center of our life; trusting and hoping in him for everything, leaving everything and following him all the days of our life.

Isaiah says, "The people who walked in the darkness have seen a great light." Matthew sees this prophecy is fulfilled in Jesus' preaching and ministry in Galilee. What is this darkness of which they speak? We can all look back on times when we lost our way, maybe did things we are now ashamed of. We regret lost opportunities. And now we wonder, "How could I have been so blind? I was really in darkness then." All the bad things that make the evening news and the next day's headlines make it painfully clear that there is great darkness hovering over our world today. We live in the midst of war, terrorism, genocide and civil strife. Into this darkness comes the Gospel, the message of Jesus Christ. At Christmas we celebrated the coming of him who is the light of the world. How could his coming pierce the darkness. What will dispel the darkness that hangs over today's world? It starts small... with one person refusing to hate, resolving to love... with one person refusing to be selfish, resolving to reach out... with one person refusing to despair, resolving to hope. It starts with us. Jesus calls us to be fishers of people in our families, where we work, where we play. Everybody is not called for priesthood or religious life, but all are called to love, to hope in Jesus.

At this moment in history, as it was always, we are people who live under a cloud of uncertainty, under threat from those who hate us. But we say with the psalmist: "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom should I fear? The Lord is my life's refuge, whom should I be afraid? Wait for the Lord with courage, be stouthearted and wait for the Lord.

St. Paul is insistent in today's reading on Jesus as the focus of Christian discipleship. Jesus is the great light, and no one, however exalted, can take his place. Paul confronts the dissensions in the Christian community at Corinth because they are making lesser lights to the greater light. The Church is divided into factions – not over doctrinal differences but over personalities. Some are following Apollos, an eloquent and enthusiastic teacher who attracts the well-educated to Christianity. Some, mainly Jewish Christians, rally to the name of Peter, some stay loyal to the memory of Paul, preferring his passion and bluntness. This division of the Church is destructive, and Paul argues for unity under Christ. Christianity is Christ. It was Christ who died for the sins of others and all Christians are baptized in his name. Paul wants the community at Corinth to be a Christian community, not a collection of factions and not slaves of personality cults. No leader is important, can attach disciples to himself.

Paul resists any attempt to make Christian discipleship a matter of following this or that leader. Religious authority does not lead others to itself. It points to Christ. For Paul there is only one answer to the question, "Who are you for?" The Christian must answer, "I am for Christ."

A third aspect of the discipleship we see in today's Gospel is leaving everything and following Jesus. Jesus said to them, "Come after me and I will make you fishers of men, and at once they left their nets and followed him." Here there are no thinking, analysis or discussion. But only decisions that take courage and strength. Our life is shaped not by our discussions but by our decisions.

We want to know the rule of God in our life, forgiveness and growth in grace, the sense of belonging to a spiritual community, the peace of being united to God's will – but we don't want to give up our nets, the entanglements that trap us, that hold us back. These entanglements are not the responsibilities we have in our life but are the people and relationships that distance us and separate us from Christ.

We don't want to give up gossiping, cutting corners, wrong relationships, rash judgements or addictions. So, we try to find ways of having it both ways and we can't. These nets weigh us down and hold us tight. To know the kingdom of God in our life we must be willing to leave behind the nets, the distorting entanglements of soul, heart and mind. They left their nets followed the Lord. So, can we?

Lent is the perfect time to form life-giving habits and abandon self-destructive habits.

Lent is your chance to discover the abundant life Jesus invites us to at Easter.

January 25th Feast Day of the conversion of St. Paul, the Apostle

Paul was born at Tarsus, Cilicia, of Jewish parents who were descended from the tribe of Benjamin. He was a Roman citizen from birth. For his schooling he was sent to Jerusalem, where he sat at the feet of the learned Gamaliel and was educated in the strict observance of the ancestral Law. Here he also acquired a good knowledge of exegesis (interpretation of scripture) and was trained in the practice of disputation. As a convinced and zealous Pharisee, he returned to Tarsus before the public life of Christ opened in Palestine. Sometime after the death of Our Lord, St. Paul returned to Palestine. His profound conviction and emotional character made his zeal develop into a religious fanaticism against the infant Church. He took part in the stoning of the first martyr, St. Stephen, and in the fierce persecution of the Christians that followed. He was sent to Damascus to arrest Christians. As he was nearing Damascus, a light from heaven suddenly blazed round him. Jesus with His glorified body appeared to him and addressed him, turning him away from his apparently successful career of persecuting Christians to converting to the Christian Faith and became an Apostle.

Prayer: Lord, God, You taught the whole world through the preaching of the Apostle St. Paul. As we celebrate his conversion, grant that, following his example, we may be witnesses to Your truth in this world. Amen
